Cappuccino is Italy's most famous coffee. After all, while there's no such thing as a "Grande" when it comes to types of Italian coffee; a cappuccino is a cappuccino the world over. It's basically 1/3 espresso, 1/3 steamed milk and 1/3 foam. Le cappuccino est probablement le café le plus célèbre d'Italie. Après tout, il n'y rien de plus grand en terme de café, un cappuccino est un cappuccino dans le monde entier. Il s'agit essentiellement d'espresso, de lait chauffé à la vapeur et de mousse.
*Macchiato	150	0
A macchiato is an espresso married to a cappuccino and a slightly foamy child. It's an espresso with a drop or two of hot milk served in the same little cup as the espresso. Un macchiato est le résultat d'un mariage entre un espresso et un cappuccino qui donnant un enfant légèrement mousseux. C'est un espresso avec une noisette de lait chaud et servi dans la même tasse qu'un espresso
*Marocchino	150	0
Grazie mille to the genius in Alessandria that married cocoa and espresso together to create the Marocchino! It's a shot of espresso, a layer of foam, and a sprinkle of cacao powder in a glass mug, dusted with cocoa powder. Un grand Merci au génie d'Alessandria qui a lié cacao et espresso pour inventer le Marocchino! C'est un espresso surplombé d'une couche de mousse de lait et une pincée de poudre de cacao servie dans une tasse en verre afin de sublimer le contraste de couler entre le café et la mousse de lait.

Order just a latte in Italy and you might be surprised to be served a tall glass of milk. What we in the US call a latte is a caffè latte in Italy. Have your coffee Roman style "caffè corretto" is an espresso with a shot of Sambuca – the Romans say this is the "correct" way for coffee.
